GOOD LORD, HE'S DONE IT

Captain Phil Layton, of Hythe Salvation Army, has completed an epic 900-mile cycle-ride across the length of Britain in just nine days. He set off from Land's End in Cornwall on Monday, July 19, and arrived at John O'Groats in Scotland 24 hours ahead of schedule. The feat has raised more than £2,500 so far, which is to be spent on food parcels.

EUROTUNNEL passengers were left fuming when they ended up on a round trip back to Folkestone after they were forgotten about and left on a train.

The seven cars and the people travelling in them were at the end of the last carriage, which staff failed to unload at the Channel Tunnel terminal in France.

The oversight was due to an earlier car-oil spill at the front compartment which had to be kept empty for cleaning, but staff didn't notice there were still others at the back waiting to disembark.

It was only when the train started to return to England that alarmed passengers realised the mistake and alerted crew-members.

In total, they spent two-and-a-half hours crossing the Channel three times before they could set off on their onward journeys from the French side at Coquelles.

A Eurotunnel official said the mistake was down to human error. "The crew apologised immediately and we arranged for managers to be present when they arrived back in England," he said.

"We put them straight on to the next train back, gave them a full refund and offered them a free Flexipass return trip, our first-class ticket."

"This is the first time this has happened and it's a little embarrassing, but we apologised

Cameras used to snap thugs on the Downs

■ BY JAMES ALEXANDRE

TEENAGERS who hold illegal parties and go camping on the Folkestone Downs are being targeted by new thermal-imaging cameras used by the police.

Officers are warning youngsters they could be arrested and fined up to £20,000 if found on the area, which is a Site of Special Scientific Interest.

The cameras have been introduced after complaints from walkers who said they have been met with abuse from the youths when trying to talk to them about the problem.

Notices are also being put up by Kent Police, Kent Fire and Rescue and the White Cliffs Countryside Partnership warning of the consequences.

The area around Crete Road West and Sugarloaf Hill attracts teenagers who are known to drink alcohol, light fires, cause damage to wildlife and leave litter.

The Folkestone Downs SSSI stretches from Sugarloaf Hill to Etchinghill and is protected under the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000.

Damage

The WCCP's Philip Green said: "We want to encourage people to visit this area which is one of Britain's top wildlife and conservation sites.

"However, it is not a place for lighting fires, illegal camping and raves which can cause significant damage."

Shepway Neighbourhood Policing Unit's PC John Weller said: "Officers from our neighbourhood task team will be using thermal imaging cameras to detect illegal gatherings on the Downs and will deal with anyone caught.

"We would like parents to support us by finding out where their children are planning to hold their parties and to warn them of the consequences."

KFRS's Stuart Tickle said: "Every year across Kent hundreds of acres

WARNING SIGNS: (l-r) KFRS's Stuart Tickle, PC John Weller and WCCP's Philip Green of unique habitat are destroyed, thousands of birds and animals are killed, while millions of gallons of water are wasted through arson and carelessness.

"Countryside fires put enormous demands on our resources and pose a serious threat to people's lives and homes.

"Kent has large areas of dense woodland, open heath lands, plenty of wide open playing fields and agricultural fields, making countryside fires an acute problem during dry, hot weather like we are experiencing now.

"Kent Fire and Rescue Service (KFRS) want to encourage people to take care and think about what they're doing.

"For example, drivers should refrain from discarding cigarettes through car windows while driving along as this, combined with dry grass verges, can easily lead to fires and threaten people, wildlife and buildings."

Advice to help prevent fires starting include keeping matches and lighters away from children, not to leave children unsupervised in the countryside, don't light fires, drop litter or gather rubbish which could set alight and to ask your local council to take away unwanted furniture or report abandoned vehicles or fly-tipped waste.

You can anonymously report any information about illegal fire lighting and those responsible to

Search on for Leas Lift crash survivor

A PASSENGER who was on the Leas Lift when it crashed 40 years ago is being sought by a campaigner interested in resurrecting its history.

Robert Moulard of the 1890 Leas Lift Carriage Restoration Appeal said he spoke to a man in Folkestone while out fund-raising just before Christmas.

The man said he was one of the 11 passengers who was onboard one of the carriages in June 1966, when a staff member failed to turn a brake wheel all the way round properly. Both carriages collided with their barriers and broke their windows.

Mr Moulard hopes to get back in touch with the man, who said he lived in Maidstone, in order to find out more about what happened that day.

The 1890 carriage appeal successfully raised funds to repair and refurbish one of the old stepped wooden vehicles. It is now hoped it will feature in the Lower Leas Coastal Park yards away from the cliff lift service, which also reopened for business for the first time in over a year last Saturday.

If you are the man in question or know of him please get in touch with us here at Yourshepway.

New guide to all the good stuff in town

HYTHE Chamber of Commerce and Tourism has published the 2010/2011 edition of its visitor guide.

It comes in fold-out map format and describes and pinpoints local attractions and places of interest, including where-to-stay and where-to-eat sections and a classified list of services provided by chamber members.

Copies are available from high street shops and businesses, Hythe Library, Light Railway stations, Stop 24 motorway services and information outlets in Folkestone and Romney Marsh.

Tourism organisation Discover Folkestone, Hythe & Romney Marsh will also use it to attract visitors from farther afield, including the near-Continent.

Design drinks coaster with artist's DIY kit

A CREATIVE Quarter artist has launched a do-it-yourself kit where youngsters and adults can create and design their own drinks coasters.

Customers fill in a grid using any or all of ten colours to choose from, which they then bring to Jo Letchford Mosaics in Folkestone's Old High Street and for £5 will be given a kit with glass tiles, board, a PVA glue pen, grout and full instructions.

The DIY kits are suitable for those aged seven and upwards and are ideal for a holiday activity or as a gift.

Organiser Zachary Cooke said there had been "phenomenal" feedback from the event and that audiences could look forward to another two outdoor showings, featuring movie classics Ghostbusters on Sunday, August 8,

AMPHITHEATRE: Crowd enjoy screening at Lower Leas Coastal Park

Peddalling pastor crosses line on fund-raising trek

■ BY JAMES ALEXANDRE

A HYTHE church pastor has cycled the length of Britain in just nine days and raised thousands of pounds for the Salvation Army.

Captain Phil Layton completed the gruelling 900-mile journey last week, where he was met at John O'Groats by members of the Wick branch of the Christian organisation.

He arrived at his destination some 24 hours earlier than planned, after setting off from Lands' End on Monday, July 19, but come the ninth day felt good enough to push on and do the last 117 miles in one stretch.

Phil, who heads the Hythe ministry in Portland Road, said: "At times everything seemed to be against me – the hills, the wind and the rain."

There were a couple of hair-raising moments along the way, including when a car was seconds away from crashing into him.

He said: "It was just as I was coming out of the Lake District at 8am when a car was coming round the country lane on my side, but couldn't see me because of the hedge."

"He quickly pulled on the brakes and the front passenger wheel came shooting off. The front of the car clunked and skidded across the road, it must have all happened in about a second-and-a-half."

"Even speaking about it now I can feel the raised hairs on the back of my neck."

"The driver was obviously in shock but he was a car mechanic and I think that must have helped [with his reflexes]."

"The police came and took all the details but it was all quickly done in about ten minutes. I realised I had to make a move soon as I could feel myself cooling down."

HAIR-RAISING: Phil Layton battled wind, rain, hills and was almost run over on his way from Lands End to John O'Groats

Eddie and Jenny Chambers from Folkestone's South Kent Community Church followed in a motor home and kept him informed about his timekeeping and progress, serving him hot chocolate and a snack every 15-20 miles.

He stayed in campsites en route which he was able to book or cancel at short notice depending on how far he had travelled each day.

Phil said: "I could feel muscles starting to cramp but I was just able to shift position when I needed to and I only got one puncture along the whole route and that was on the first day."

"As I cycled through Wick toward the end the heavens opened and I was drenched. But just before the end the sun came out and there was the welcoming sight of our Wick comrades complete with flag for the finish line."

The amount raised so far is about £2,500 for the work of the Salvation Army in Hythe and Romney Marsh, which will go towards providing food parcels to those in need.

profusely. The incident is still being investigated and it was out of the blue, but we are definitely treating this as human error."

He said the first compartment of the last carriage had been taken out of service "for a few return trips due to the safety aspect and the smell".

But staff at the station assumed the entire wagon must have been empty when the incident took place on Saturday, with the first outgoing train from Folkestone at 08.50am.

The company, which runs both the Channel Tunnel and the shuttle service, recently reported losses of 44.8 million euros for the first half of this year, due to delays over insurance compensation for the 2008 fire.

Woman, 98, killed in scooter accident

A HYTHE woman has died in hospital after her mobility scooter was involved in a crash with a van.

Edith Sherwood, 98, was riding her scooter across Scanlons Bridge Road in the town at 10.20am last Friday when the incident occurred.

She was airlifted to a hospital in London with critical injuries, but news of her death was reported on Monday.

The road was closed for four hours while forensic police officers were at the scene. The incident is still being investigated and police are appealing for witnesses.

Anyone who has information is asked to phone the Serious Collision Investigation Unit on 01622 798538.

Canal awarded the Green Flag

HYTHE'S Royal Military Canal has been awarded the prestigious Green Flag, ranking alongside Folkestone's Lower Leas Coastal Park.

Winners of this national quality standard are judged to be welcoming, safe, well maintained and involve the local community.

It is the first time the canal had been submitted – although the coastal park will be flying the flag for the fourth year running.

They are among 1,200 parks and open spaces across Britain to secure Green Flags from Keep Britain Tidy in 2010.

Cabinet member for environmental services, David Monk, said: "It's great news that another of our open spaces has this national recognition. I am sure the people of Hythe will agree that their national treasure deserves this award."

"The park and the canal are different in character but both meet the eight key criteria for the Green Flag Award by improving areas for wildlife, conserving heritage and being managed sustainably."

"I would like to thank the staff at both sites whose pride in their work has helped us secure this accolade."

News of the Green Flag award comes a few weeks after the coastal park was recognised as being the 20th best place for a picnic in the UK by My Red Tractor, an organisation which promotes high-quality food production and standards.

Two weeks left for tenants to have say over housing plans

THERE'S less than two weeks left for council housing tenants and leaseholders to give their views on proposed improvements and a chance to win £100.

A second consultation newsletter and survey is being delivered this week to those in Canterbury, Dover, Shepway and Thanet, summarising the four authorities' proposals to set up an arms-length management organisation (ALMO) to manage their housing services.

It also answers questions received from tenants about what's being proposed and gives readers another chance to complete the survey and win £100 worth of high street shopping vouchers.

The aim of the ALMO is to make improvements to council housing services received by over 18,000 tenants and leaseholders in East Kent, as well as achieve estimated savings of £1.5 million over the next few years.

More substantial savings could be made later on through improved repairs contracts and bringing together administrative services. By law, these savings have to be invested into improving the council housing services.

There should also be more convenient access to council housing services on weekends and evenings, as well as a greater say for tenants in how things are run. Tenants and leaseholders will also have more influence in setting standards for the service they receive.

For the proposal to go ahead, the majority of local tenants and leaseholders must support the plans. Over 50 face-to-face events have already been held over the last few weeks, as well as through telephone and newsletter surveys.

Surveys are being sent out to all tenants and leaseholders and can be returned by post. The survey can also be filled in online at www.shepway.gov.uk/sharedhousing. The closing date for surveys to be returned is Friday, August 13.

The proposals are part of wider plans to share council services across East Kent, as a way of improving services at a time of increasing financial pressure on councils.

• To do the survey, tenants and leaseholders should go to www.shepway.gov.uk/sharedhousing

Walking in MP's footsteps

ALMOST three months have passed since the general election sent the country into uncharted political territory and a new MP took the helm for Shepway.

Now is my chance to catch up with Damian Collins, the first fresh face to represent Folkestone and Hythe in 27 years, to see how he is adapting to the role just before Parliament rose for the summer break.

Stepping inside the daunting Portcullis House, the metal-and-glass office building across the road from the Palace of Westminster, is much like going through security at Heathrow – albeit much quicker.

All belongings have to pass through a scanner before you walk through a metal detector and then have your picture taken, which is then handed to you in the form of a visitor's pass to be worn at all times.

I'm met by Lorraine, Mr Collins's secretary, who walks me towards the café and explains she has been coming to work here for more than 20 years, most of which has been under Mr Collins's predecessor Michael Howard.

Procession

We are then met by Mr Collins himself, who gives a rundown of his diary for the day, including two Commons debates and a meeting with Southern Water.

He said: "As an MP, you quickly realise there are huge kinds of demands on your time when Parliament is sitting.

"When it's not, you have to work very hard to see as many people as you can, to give constituents the support and advice they need."

A visit to his office in the adjoining Norman Shaw building reveals a small room at the end of a corridor, overlooking the Thames.

The walk back to the Commons chamber is via an underground walkway and can be done in about five minutes at a pace. However, we are slowed by the ceremonial Speaker's Procession, which takes place before every debate's sitting.

As Mr Collins takes his seat inside, I make my way up to the public gallery above.

Culture Secretary Jeremy Hunt faces questions on subjects such as broadband for rural areas and the BBC licence fee.

During a discussion on Government programme Creative Partnerships, Mr Collins rises from his seat to indicate he wants to be called by the Speaker.

His question expresses concern about the "tiers of management" involved with the body despite its "excellent" work and delivery on the ground, and cites Folkestone's Creative Foundation as an example of what could be done by private-sector organisations.

In response, minister Ed Vaizey says his point was well-made and that such initiatives could be joined up to be made as effective as possible.

It is not to be Mr Collins's only appearance in the Commons today, as later on the Reporter JAMES ALEXANDRE spent the day with Shepway's new Member of Parliament Damian Collins to find out how he's been getting on in the job three months on.

Government's flagship academies bills are to be debated late into the night and passed by 317 votes to 225.

After the first debate, he tells me: "There's a feeling that attendance in the chamber is up since the election. New members are keen to get used to the environment and to speaking.

"People have spent a long time working on their campaigns and now they're here and have got the chance to use the opportunity to raise points they couldn't do before."

Asked how he would like to be judged by the end of this Parliament, he says: "I feel strongly that we should have a new power station at Dungeness and I'd like to feel that we'd have done everything we can to make that happen and it would be terrific news if we were successful.

"During the questions in the debate, one of the issues that came up was broadband access and that's a big issue for people on Romney Marsh and part of the North Downs.

"We want to see more creative businesses, smaller businesses that are dependent on the internet, people working from home. That, for me, is increasingly important."

In his first few weeks in Parliament, Mr Collins was elected to the culture, media and sport select committee, which will oversee the Olympic Games in 2012.

He said: "It gives you a chance to get to the heart of issues that reflect that sector, and for the constituency to demonstrate that we've got a great story to tell with some of the work of the Creative Foundation.

"The Secretary of State will come in to be questioned by us, as will the Director-General of the BBC and the leading figures in the arts and creative industries."

How does he think the coalition government has fared so far and will it last until the next planned election in May 2015?

"I think the coalition has made a good start and has been well received. People see that we put aside political differences to provide the stable government the country needed.

"We are going to have a very difficult time paying off the debts left behind by Gordon Brown and that requires some pretty difficult decisions, but it looks as though that stability is there and there's no reason it shouldn't continue to the next election."

"It's a very exciting time to be a Member of Parliament. I think we've got terrific enterprise and creativity in Shepway and I think we need the Government to get behind local people, to create the right environment for people's businesses to thrive and provide the services they need, to trust people a little bit more."

Brian snaps up title to put work in the frame

■ BY HARRY COLLINS

A MODEL from Sandwich has earned Dover photographer Brian Brown the top award at a prestigious competition.

The winning photograph was a portrait of former Sandwich Technology pupil Amy Roberts.

The black-and-white image gained Mr Brown first place in the contemporary-portrait section of the Master Photographers' Association contest (South East region).

He came first and second in this category, the highlight of a successful event for the photographer.

Mr Brown, from River, said: "I was delighted to do so well, getting first and second place in the contemporary portraits. There were 250 entries in all the categories and there was a lot of competition in this section."

He described model Amy as "vibrant and bubbly, very, very good to work with".

"We have worked with Amy before and I think this helps because she is used to our directions and instinctively goes with what we ask and we got some fabulous pictures that day," he said.

There was yet more success for Mr Brown, who, after dominating the contemporary-portrait section, went on to gain second place in the fashion-and-beauty category before capping off the evening by earning a merit in the classical-portrait class.

Mr Brown, who has been a professional photographer since 1995, was thrilled by his results in the competition.

He said: "If an image wins, then it obviously means that everyone likes it."

"I think there were some very good photographs there, but I am always looking for an image to wow people."

With such success across the board, Mr Brown hopes that his achievements will have a positive impact on his work. He said: "I hope that the publicity will generate more business for me so that I can relax and get the very best from clients when photographing them."

Mr Brown produces a range of photographs, from weddings to individual portraits, and is available for tuition classes.

QUESTION & ANSWER

PHIL G

Q Tell us something about yourself

A I am the artist-in-residence at Chimaera Gallery, Tontine Street. I have painted professionally for more than 20 years. My work covers a range of subjects including portraits, landscapes, abstract – I paint anything that inspires me.

My work is heavily influenced by my favourite artists, the Surrealists.

Q What first interested you in art?

A That I could do it! I prefer the creative side of art to the academic side. I have always been interested in creativity in many forms and to me painting is a natural progression for anyone who has a creative mind.

Q What is your connection to Folkestone?

A I moved here 30 years ago – and have never been able to leave! I think I'm part of the furniture now.

Q What do you think of Folkestone's largely arts-based regeneration?

A It's really good to see the changes that are taking place and I regularly chat to new artists in Chimaera Gallery, which is in the heart of the Creative Foundation's regeneration area, Tontine Street.

There is still a lot to be done, though. At Chimaera Gallery we represent many local artists and of course we rely on sales to keep us going.

It would be good if more people knew what's going on in Folkestone and came to look around some of the small businesses in the Creative Quarter.

Q What is your favourite type of artwork and why?

A Surrealism. To me, it fits all aspects of art – it can be serious, it can be funny. I find it very inspiring.

Somehow surrealism is more about what goes on inside the head than outside. It taps into the subconscious and reflects feelings and emotions.

Q How can people find out more about you and your work?

A I'm in Chimaera Gallery every Wednesday and Thursday – visitors are very welcome. You can pop in for a chat and a browse. There are some photographs of my work on our website at www.chimaeragallery.co.uk.

Q Is there a particular piece of artwork that inspires you?

A I am inspired by many of the works of the Belgian painter Magritte.

He once said: "My painting is visible images which conceal nothing; they evoke mystery and, indeed, when one sees one of my pictures, one asks oneself this simple question 'What does that mean?' It does not mean anything, because mystery means nothing either, it is unknowable."

Magritte taught me how to look at things differently.

Q What do you like to do in your spare time?

A I love anything creative. A big hobby of mine is gardening and I have created my own outdoor space which is based on serenity.

My garden includes many different features – there is a water feature, mirrors, sculpture and many, many different plants and flowers. It is very calming, a bit of a spiritual oasis away from the madness of life.

Q Tell us something not many people know about you

A I was in the Boy Scouts. Other than that, I am dyslexic in writing.

When I was at school – many years ago – the condition wasn't recognised and no support was given to children with literacy problems.

When I was 14, I had a reading age of nine and couldn't spell. I have never been able to take on jobs that require writing.

However, I do believe that this disadvantage led to my creativity. I have always worked with my hands – I do all sorts of DIY, decorating, gardening – and, of course, painting.

Q & A

The painter whose work is featured at Folkestone's Chimaera Gallery speaks to James Alexandre about his introduction to art, surrealism, Magritte – and why he attributes much of his creativity to his dyslexia

TRADITION: Brigadier Simon Wolsey OBE receives the Key to England from Lord Boyce

New man holds Key to England

THE new Deputy Constable of Dover Castle has been unveiled at a ceremony.

Brigadier Simon Wolsey OBE was inducted as the 211st Deputy Constable of Dover Castle on Thursday, July 22.

Following tradition said to date back almost 1,000 years, Brigadier Wolsey was handed the Key to England and the Statutes of Dover Castle as symbols of his office.

The ceremony was presided over by Admiral the Lord Boyce, Constable of Dover Castle and Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports, roles that have been combined since the 13th century.

Successive Army commanders in south-east England have held the role of Deputy Constable since 1868 and Brig Wolsey has recently taken over the 2

(South East) Brigade at Shorncliffe.

Speaking after the ceremony, held in the Constable's Tower, Brig Wolsey said: "It is a great honour and privilege to hold this historic position."

"While the role of Deputy Constable is largely ceremonial these days, it symbolises the important role of the Army in the south-east of England and the continuing requirement for community engagement."

The appointments of Lord Warden and Deputy Constable are said to pre-date the Norman Conquest by 16 years, originating in 1050.

Right Reverend Trevor Wilmot, Bishop of Dover and Chaplain to the Lord Warden, was at the ceremony and gave it his blessing.

Time is running out for council tenants to give their views

■ BY NICK AMES

THERE are only a few weeks left for council-housing tenants and leaseholders to give their views on proposals to improve their services and be in with a chance to win £100.

A second consultation newsletter and survey is being delivered this week to all council tenants and leaseholders in Dover, Shepway and Thanet.

The newsletter summarises the councils' proposals to set up an 'arms length management organisation' (ALMO) to manage their housing services.

It also answers questions received from tenants about what is being proposed and gives readers another chance to complete the survey and win high-street shopping vouchers worth up to £100.

The aim of this is to make improvements to council-housing services received by more than 18,000 tenants and leaseholders in east Kent as well as achieve estimated savings of £1.5 million over the next few years.

More substantial savings could be achieved in later years through improved repairs contracts and bringing together administrative services.

Standards

By law, these savings have to be invested into improving the housing services.

The proposals will also mean more convenient access to housing services at weekends and in the evenings, a greater say for tenants in how things are run and a bigger role for tenants and leaseholders in setting the standards for the service they receive.

For the proposal to go ahead, a majority of tenants and leaseholders must support the plans.

More than 50 face-to-face events have already been held over the last few weeks and this has been supplemented by telephone and newsletter surveys.

Project manager Paul Bartlett said: "Whether you've already filled in a survey before or not, we still need to hear your views."

"We want to improve the services on offer to our tenants and leaseholders and we believe that these proposals will do just that."

"We want a housing service that people can be proud of and that is one of the best in the country."

Surveys are being sent to all tenants and leaseholders and can be returned by post. The survey can also be filled in online at www.thanet.gov.uk/sharedhousing

The closing date for surveys to be returned is Friday, August 13.

Could budget cut mean end of speed cameras?

■ BY NICK AMES

TRANSPORT chiefs at County Hall are to review the effectiveness of speed cameras – but they have ruled out a quick decision on the future of the network.

Councils across the country are considering scrapping the cameras altogether after the Government slashed £38 million of road-safety funding, but Kent County Council says it will review the situation before any decisions are made.

The authority has already slashed more than £500,000 from its speed-camera budget for this year as part of a £15m savings plan, in line with other local authorities in the UK.

Nick Chard, cabinet member for highways, said: "The Government has cut the grant for speed cameras and therefore we are going to pass that cut on.

"We have always seen speed cameras as potentially improving road safety and never as an income generator, but if there are some cameras that are not contributing to road safety then I would want to identify those.

"I want to discuss the cuts with the police and the safety-camera partnership because we haven't had the opportunity yet to properly reflect on what they might mean for the county."

When asked if KCC might follow the lead of other councils in scrapping some cameras, Cllr Chard replied: "I don't want to predict anything and I don't want to compromise the safety of road-users in Kent.

"It needs proper consideration rather than a very quick reaction."

As a result of the funding cut, councillors in Oxfordshire voted to switch off all 72 of the county's speed cameras from this weekend.

Networks in Devon, Cornwall, Somerset and Northamptonshire are also among those under review.

Earlier this year, the Kent and Medway Safety Camera Partnership revealed that

DAYS NUMBERED? Budget cuts could mean that speed cameras are scrapped, to the delight of some Kent motorists more than 33,400 speeding tickets were issued to motorists in 2008-09, earning more than £2m for the central-government pot.

But despite claims by the partnership of a 63 per cent reduction in the number of people killed or seriously injured since 2002, motorists' groups say they want the cameras gone.

Ian Taylor, Kent spokesman for the Association of British Drivers, said it was bad driving rather than excessive speed that caused accidents.

"There may be a few accident blackspots where speed cameras do a good job, but not many. We regard them as an excuse for revenue-raising. The money might not go back to the council, but it ends up in the public purse," he said.

"I just hope that if they're taken away it doesn't open the door for more speed-humps and 20mph limit zones."

The move to discontinue central funding for speed cameras was included in the coalition agreement.

Road safety minister Mike Penning said the Government was delivering on its pledge to "end the war on the motorist".

Electoral reform scheme 'doesn't go far enough'

A PLANNED referendum on electoral reform offering a change to the 'alternative vote' system has been met with cross-party derision in Kent.

Next year the public will be asked if it wants to abolish the current 'first-past-the-post' format for electing MPs – a referendum agreed by the Conservatives when forming the coalition with the Lib Dems.

Under the alternative vote (AV) system proposed, voters rank candidates in order of preference. Anyone receiving more than 50 per cent is elected, otherwise the person with the fewest votes is eliminated and their backers' second choices are counted.

However, some of Kent's most outspoken politicians say such a reform does not go far enough in ensuring a Parliament that is truly representative of the public.

Former UK Independence Party leader Nigel Farage, who lives in Westerham, said the AV system would make very little difference to the current make-up of the House of Commons.

He added that many parties preferred the AV+ system, in which there is a top-up group of MPs whose election is based on regional votes for parties.

Preferential

Mr Farage, a South East MEP, said: "AV is preferential but still not proportional. You could still end up with a party like ours that attracts more than a million votes but still doesn't get any MPs.

"Nick Clegg has let his party down because this is not what they fought for."

The referendum, due to be held on May 5 next year, will pose the question "Do you want the United Kingdom to adopt the 'alternative vote' system instead of the current 'first past the post' system for electing MPs to the House of Commons?"

Shepway Lib Dem councillor Peter Carroll, who lost out to Tory rival Helen Grant in the race to become Maidstone's new MP, admitted the AV system was not what most Lib Dems were looking for.

He said: "I can't see that the alternative vote is going to revolutionise the system.

"It's wrong that parties like UKIP don't have a representative in Parliament. I may not agree with their views, but a lot of people voted for them."

KCC Labour leader Leslie Christie said: "Last year was very bad for Labour. In the county council elections we received 17 per cent of the vote but only two per cent of the number of councillors, so there's a clear case of misrepresentation. Personally, I'd rather have a clear-cut government or council rather than one run by coalitions."

Cllr Christie's view is shared by Tory North Thanet MP Roger Gale, who added that the AV system was a "cop-out for people who can't make up their minds".

He said: "I don't want to create a situation where we are in perpetual coalition."

County MPs join call for referendum date change

FIVE of Kent's Tory MPs have signed an Early Day Motion calling for the voting-reform referendum to be moved because it clashes with devolved elections.

Mark Reckless (Rochester and Stroud), Tracey Crouch (Chatham and Aylesford), Adam Holloway (Gravesend), Bob Stewart (Beckenham) and Michael Fallon (Sevenoaks) are among 44 fellow Conservatives to have backed the motion.

They believe that holding the referendum on May 5 next year – the same day as the Welsh Assembly, Scottish Parliament, Northern Ireland Assembly and some local council elections – could "cloud the referendum debate".

Kent counts down to Olympic gains

TWO years from now the eyes of the world will be set on the UK as the Olympic Games return to London after 62 years.

An official launch marked the start of the countdown at the Olympic Park in east London on Tuesday last week.

Kent will feature prominently during the Olympics and Paralympics, with 37 training camps for thousands of competitors.

They include Margate beach, which will provide training facilities for volleyball teams, Brands Hatch for cyclists, and Ashford's Julie Rose Stadium for athletes.

Mike Hill, cabinet member for communities at County Hall, said the authority was working to maximise benefits to Kent.

"We've got a large number of contracts worth about £20 million and we're expecting more to come," he said.

Cllr Hill said KCC was also focusing on the Cultural Olympiad, which showcases the UK's arts and culture.

Asked how much money the Games could potentially bring to the county, Cllr Hill said: "The Open Golf next year is estimated to bring in £70 million through investment.

"That's bringing in a quarter of a million people, so we should bring in a substantial amount through tourism and business. We are very close to the Games, but we are also close to Europe."

GET SET, GO: Athlete Michael Johnson joins children at the Olympic Park to launch the two-year countdown

To celebrate the countdown, sporting, cultural and art events took place as part of the Open Weekend challenge last week, when residents took part in activities ranging from belly-dancing to speed-drawing.

Sport and Olympic minister Hugh Robertson said it was a great opportunity to get involved in London 2012.

The MP for Faversham and Mid Kent was at the launch of the countdown at the Olympic Park with London mayor Boris Johnson and former athlete and chairman of the London Organising Committee of the Olympic Games (LOCOG) Sebastian Coe.

Mr Robertson said: "London 2012 is in excellent shape. The construction phase is 70 per cent complete and the LOCOG has attracted an unprecedented level of commercial sponsorship.

"We are making real strides in developing a meaningful sports legacy which will be announced in the autumn."

Last Tuesday's launch was also part of a new campaign to invite volunteers to help out at the Games.

Organisers are searching for 70,000 volunteers, and Cllr Hill said several thousand were already on the Kent database.

In Medway, thousands of people marked the countdown with a one-mile fun-run around Rochester. They were joined by sporting stars Paul Nihill, the 1964 Tokyo Olympic silver-medallist in the 50km walk, and Liz McVeigh, a member of the women's rowing team in the 1980 Moscow Olympics.

To sign up as a volunteer, you can go to www.london2012.com/volunteering.

BREAK TIME

Mary Poppins pops along to St Peter's

PUPILS, staff and parents all played their part in a production of Mary Poppins at St Peter's primary school, Folkestone.

Governors, grandparents and members of other schools made up the rest of the cast, who rehearsed weekly from January to March and then several times each week from April.

The shows, on July 14-16, included such special effects as cannon blasts, light-up fingers and Mary's magic carpetbag.

Director Michelle Charlton-Taylor said: "The children have done well, learned their lines and improved their acting skills."

"Staff involvement was exceptional and the audiences jumped with fright, laughed a great deal and sang along to all the old favourites."

Mary Poppins was played by teaching assistant Mel Wyn; year five pupil Maisie Sainsbury was Jane; and year six's Charlie Goodsell played Michael.

Bert was played by family-liaison officer Kim Adlington.

Passing on skills to the new power generation

■ BY JAMES ALEXANDRE

PROSPECTIVE engineers jumped at the chance to bring their studies to life with a week-long work-placement at Dungeness B nuclear power station.

Students from the Marsh Academy in New Romney and Folkestone's Harvey Grammar were there as part of a long-standing arrangement between the power plant and local schools. Each student was given at least one employee at the station to shadow throughout their placement.

Josh Kirby, 15, from the Marsh Academy, said he was amazed by the equipment in the station turbine and enjoyed a tour of the control-room simulator.

He said: "Before my work experience at Dungeness B I didn't know how electricity was made – now I do. I enjoyed looking around the control-room simulator and was even able to trip the reactor at the press of a button, which was fun."

Josh said he hoped to apply for an electrical engineering apprenticeship at Dungeness B when he left school.

Jenny Hollingsbee, the academy's director of work-related vocational education, said: "The academy is quite an isolated school, so it's particularly important that large employers like Dungeness B are willing to provide opportunities for our students."

"The skilled, wide-ranging roles at the power station are always of interest to students."

EYES DOWN LOOKING: A work-experience student watches a Dungeness B member of staff during his placement

This month, a further six apprentices will start their training with Dungeness B. This is in addition to 23 apprentices from the region who are now going through their training at the power station.

The apprentices undertake a four-year training programme. The first two years are spent at the Royal Navy bases at HMS Sultan and HMS Collingwood, near Portsmouth, and the final two years are based predominantly at Dungeness B.

Energy company EDF, which runs Dungeness B, opened a £3.5 million nuclear power academy in May 2008 in Gloucester.

In the same year it signed a £10m contract with specialist nuclear-training company Flagship, which employs some 55 new apprentices in the industry every year.

Pub times review to end drinking culture

■ BY STEVE KNIGHT

A REVIEW of 24-hour drinking has been welcomed by the voice of Kent's police officers, who branded the legislation "a mistake".

Ian Pointon, chairman of the Kent Police Federation, said late-night boozing had created more problems than it had solved and resulted in fewer officers being available to fight crime during the day.

His comments follow the announcement by Home Secretary Theresa May that the Government is to crack down on binge-drinking and give communities more power to oppose 24-hour pubs and clubs.

The proposals could also spell the end for antisocial behaviour orders (Asbos).

Mr Pointon said: "I think the introduction of 24-hour drinking was a mistake.

"The idea was that we would somehow develop a Continental café culture, but that hasn't happened, especially in town centres.

"The feedback I've received from officers is that they've had more problems with people since the 24-hour laws came in.

"They're also working into the early hours, which means they're not available at other times of the day.

"It's time to say let's have a long, hard look at the licensing hours, coupled with the drinking culture in this country."

Mr Pointon's criticism is shared by Kent's former Chief Constable Mike Fuller, who warned against its introduction in an interview with KOS Media back in January 2005.

In a follow-up discussion in April 2006, Mr Fuller said: "I think the Government and the health authorities are going to have a very difficult task in changing the culture where young people go out and get totally drunk."

According to the Home Office, about one million alcohol-related violent crimes were committed last year, with a fifth of all violent incidents taking place in or around a pub or club.

Mrs May's licensing plans also include forcing late-night bars to contribute to policing costs and street-cleaning, as well as a ban on the selling of alcohol below cost price.

The latter suggestion will come as a blow to supermarket bosses who use cut-price beer and alcopop deals to lure shoppers into buying other goods from their stores.

Mr Pointon said some such offers were "irresponsible" – a view shared by the operations director of the Thanet-based Thorley Taverns pub chain, Phil Thorley.

He said: "I think 24-hour drinking is a bit of a myth because so few 24-hour licences have been issued.

"It's easy to blame everything on 24-hour drinking when it's the below-cost selling of alcohol in supermarkets that is at fault. You've only got to enter a park at night to see who is drinking and the problems it creates.

"Below-cost selling is good for supermarkets, but it's a real danger to our society."

Two apples a day keep doctor away

WE'VE all heard the expression about an apple a day, but who knew that if the dose was doubled, the benefits would grow even more?

New research suggests doctors could be worried if we all turned to Kentish apples to keep them away on a full-time basis.

The findings are from ISAFRUIT, a research project partly paid for by the European Commission. Its researchers found that if we ate a pair of apples a day, our cholesterol could be reduced by an astonishing 10 per cent.

Paddock Wood company Norman Collett Ltd is a member of the English Fruit Marketing Group.

Sarah Calcutt, its business development manager, said: "The health benefits of eating English apples as part of your daily diet are already well documented and researched.

"Now we are seeing the benefits that regular consumption of two apples a day can have in helping reduce cholesterol levels."

American Tammi Flynn, a dietician and author of the 3-Apple-A-Day book, claims an apple before every meal will help us lose three times the amount of weight than dieting attempts without the apples. She claims a triple dose of apples a day helped 376 people lose 6,312 pounds in 12 weeks.

The discoveries are backed by research carried out by Washington State University in the Sensory Evaluation Laboratory at the School of Food Science on Rubens and seven other varieties of apples.

It showed Rubens giving a balance between sweetness and sourness, with high apple-flavour intensity.

Colletts started exclusively planting the Rubens in 2007 and has seen demand soar 400 per cent – it now has 140,000 trees dedicated to this variety.

YOUR LETTERS

Words of wisdom a refreshing change

How refreshing to read last week's blog from David Plumstead of Shepway Environment and Community Network.

Although I fear that unthinking, uncaring or disinterested people will keep the present Shepway council regime alive for many years, it is absolutely refreshing to learn that someone somewhere is aware of the appalling decisions that are being made.

This awful council is covering the district with tarmac, concrete and bricks and mortar faster than we can keep up with... still, as long as the developers are happy!

Nick Jones
Folkestone

Swamped by tidal wave of concrete

Well said, David Plumstead! What price the future of Shepway if our glorious council keeps allowing developers to make merry while the residents (remember them, anyone?) watch as where they live is swamped by a tidal wave of concrete.

Phil Smith
Hythe

Greens preferable to the old grey parties

Yet more waffle from Labour's Donald Worsley (last week's letters). He opposes the proposed vote for AV, but favours the iniquitous first-past-the-post system rather than the surely far fairer single-transferable-vote version.

The so-called coalition is hardly an advert for such as the Tories are acting as if they had a majority, with the Liberal Democrats tagging along on just because of a whiff of power and are now intent on decimating the decent public institutions that Labour, and indeed the Liberals, put in place.

Indeed they appear to be a sort of UK version of the USA's Tea (or Tax Evaders Alliance, in my view) Party as they privatise everything and introduce the cheapskate Big Society.

The last person to try such an idea during economic hard times was a certain Chairman Mao in the 1950s and 60s. We seem then to be going from Stalin Brown to Mao-Tse Cameron.

Despite this, Mr Worsley fails to defend public services be they the NHS, education or welfare; all due to be viciously damaged, along with the people working in or depending on them.

Indeed, as regards welfare, while we all know some who appear to be bone-idle, most are genuine cases and so many charities are warning that those with long-term and

Motoring institute should stick to issues of driving rather than that of cyclists, suggests Gary Wright

THE Institute of Advanced Motorists is busying itself with the habits of drunk cyclists this week under the clever headline 'Pedals and Pimms don't mix'.

With absolutely no figures to back it up, Neil Greig, the IAM's director of policy and research, called for, well, more research into cycling accidents.

As the director of research, if he wants more research, don't tell us, just get on and organise it.

I was shocked to read you can be fined up to £1,000 for riding your bike on the road while drunk.

I have never seen such a court case and understand it's a technical issue of being in control on a public road, which would cost a fortune to gain a conviction – and I don't think our busy cops will bother.

Equally, I am surprised that IAM is bothering with this issue.

The IAM (that's the institute of smug drivers, not a the pet food manufacturer) points out "though drink-driving is socially unacceptable, many people would not think twice about cycling after consuming more than the legal blood-alcohol limit for driving".

And, there's another nugget of advice contained in its statement to the Press, where it points out that a lot of drunk cyclists will be riding home in the dark, "increasing the dangers involved".

It also says that if the cyclist is in a collision with another vehicle, "you are likely to come off worst". Well, who'd have guessed?

I'm sure someone at IAM believed it was worth a statement to the Press, but there are a couple of points with which I shall take issue:

Firstly, be clear all you folk at IAM, drink-driving is illegal. Cycling while drunk is not. Since there is clearly a balance issue if you are absolutely drunk, I think it unlikely that you'll cycle home anyway, but you can at least cycle to the pub and then push it home.

Secondly, and more importantly, what the devil is the Institute of Advanced Motorists doing by concerning itself with such an issue? What next, drunks on foot who may stagger out into the road?

This kind of nanny-state demand for more research and, inevitably, more stupid legislation died with the last Labour government.

And good riddance. I don't much care for cyclists, as I have said before (and there is a part of me that believes they should pay road tax or get off the road).

But if an adult makes a reasoned decision to get from point A to B knowing that he (or she) may have one too many so they choose to take their pushbike, then well done them.

We have spent hundreds of thousands on cycle lanes, so if they use those, what business is it of smug drivers? If a drunk cyclist crashes into a hedge on their way home, that is their business and I don't particularly care.

And neither should the Institute of Advanced Motorists. It should stick to recruiting members with good-at-driving commentaries and 10 per cent insurance discounts for their 'advanced' drivers and let cyclists live their lives as they want to.

Coalition gamblers will pay the price

The latest figures for economic growth in the UK of 1.1 per cent in the last quarter show just how wrong this coalition is to cut jobs and services so savagely in coming years.

This level of exceptional growth is not the result of instant budget cuts by Chancellor George Osborne, but the hard efforts of Gordon Brown and Alistair Darling, when in office, to support public services and keep people in work producing for the country rather than sitting idle on the dole.

That the main drive for growth came from the construction industry with a phenomenal 6.6 per cent growth rate was not due to coalition deficit-reduction measures, but the result of sustained investment in public building projects now ridiculed as a luxury by the coalition.

Investment in a massive school-building programme has now been slashed – as the pupils and teachers at Pent Valley College know to their cost.

Investment in much-needed new hospitals and wards is now mothballed by the crassly-named Office of Budget Responsibility.

And not least locally, investment in much-needed social and affordable housing for young families is left to the mercy of the mortgage markets or Shepway's ever-appalling housing waiting list.

Chancellor Osborne may boast he has set out a path to restore confidence in the economy by dealing with the nation's deficit, but what he has really done is to gamble the nation's future growth and prosperity on a blind bet that political dogma will win out over economic reality.

A gamble that the Big Society will build our schools, hospitals and homes with volunteers and charitable donations rather than with skilled craftsmen and women with state-funding and good wages.

A gamble that, when it all goes wrong, will put back this country's economic recovery for a generation and make the unrest in Greece look like a toga party by comparison, so high are the stakes Mr Cameron and Mr Clegg are playing for.

One can only but hope 300-odd coalition MPs would prefer to join Gamblers Anonymous right now rather than chance their hand on Mr Osborne's ticket coming up trumps on a Euromillions rollover.

Donald Worsley
Folkestone

Vacuous Big Society an alibi for inaction

Prime Minister David Cameron's idea that people should be setting up charities and social-enterprise companies to run services that should be provided by the state will mean poorer services in all areas.

What happens where there are shortages of volunteers?

With Kent unemployment twice as high as two years ago, we need jobs.

We need to tax fairly and close tax havens, actions which if taken would generate more resources and prevent spending cuts and job losses.

Two years ago, 56 post offices were closed across the county. Now Mr Cameron wants unemployed people to reopen them with a little help from the Government.

This is at a time when start-up capital for new enterprises is very difficult to obtain. More recently, the cuts in the police force have seen the loss of 200 training places.

These are essential jobs, but is the Government suggesting these should be covered by volunteers?

Areas that are already more deprived will simply not be able to take on the role of the state in providing services themselves.

The funding won't be there and we will see further inequality.

The Big Society idea is simply an alibi for privatisation and a refusal by the Conservatives and Lib Dems to provide fair and equitable distribution of essential services.

Disturbing questions about exam papers

NCT, the UK's largest parenting charity, has highlighted concerns that school exam papers may have been subject to the influence of commercial organisations.

The charity has come across two recent exam questions presenting inaccurate information that would benefit formula milk companies.

One of the questions, in a GCSE chemistry paper, presents a label for a fictional packet of infant formula milk as the basis for a question about calcium carbonate.

On several counts the information on this label is in contravention of UK regulations.

For example, it claims the milk is "pure and natural" and makes nutritional claims not permitted in UK advertising.

Charities working to support mothers who want to breastfeed are also negatively caricatured, in the guise of "Mrs I M Right", founder of fictional organisation Responsible Mothers Are Us.

The marking criteria for this paper only judge a student's ability to interpret the information, with no room to dispute the claims.

In another example, a SAT paper in Key Stage 3 demonstrates bias towards formula over breast milk, claiming fair comparisons between the two when the information is presented without context.

NCT has submitted its concerns to Ofqual and the Charity Commission, with a request for an investigation into commercial influence on exam papers.

CAREFUL! Two-thirds of road fatalities are in lanes

Focus on dangers of countryside driving

ONCE synonymous with slow Sunday drivers and tractors holding up the traffic, country roads were the means of escape from the urban grind.

But new figures have revealed they are now the scene for two-thirds of all fatal crashes, where motorists have put their foot down despite not knowing what was round the corner.

And as well as the tragedy of the deaths, a massive £1.6 million is spent on each fatal casualty alone.

To warn people of the dangers, a country-roads campaign has been launched by Kent Highway Services which looks to push home the message to drivers not to take speed to the limit.

Campaigners say the main reason for such a high proportion of fatalities is the inappropriate use of speed in constantly-changing driving conditions.

Steve Horton, Kent Highway Services road-safety team-leader, said: "The campaign is designed to reach everyone who drives in Kent. All drivers use a country road at some point."

Kent Highway Services hopes the campaign will make drivers realise the many hazards on rural roads.

Royal blessing puts county in films spotlight

THE Queen has given Royal Assent to a new law that allows authorities in Kent to shut down roads to allow big movies to be shot.

It has been greeted as great news for the county, which has become the first area outside London to gain the unusual power.

Films are big business and the Kent Film Office boasts that it has created £14 million for the county already since it was set up four years ago. This figure has reportedly been achieved through films paying for scenes to be shot in the county and the spin-off to local economies from visitors keen to see the locations.

Recent major movies made in Kent, at least partially, include The Other Boleyn Girl, at Penshurst Place, Dover Castle and Knole Park, starring Natalie Portman, Scarlett Johansson and Eric Bana; Reese Witherspoon in Vanity Fair; Daniel Craig in The Golden Compass; and Sherlock Holmes at the Historic Dockyard Chatham, starring Jude Law and Robert Downey Jr.

There have also been several other smaller titles like The Calling with Ramsgate actress Brenda Blethyn alongside Rita Tushingham, Amanda Donohoe and Academy Award-nominated Susannah York.

■ BY MARIJKE COX

The BBC has also made films and series in Kent, including Emma, which starred Michael Gambon, Romola Garai and Jonny Lee Miller; and Is Anybody There?, in which Michael Caine played an elderly man grappling with his own mortality.

Poirot was filmed in St Margaret's Bay near Dover, while Bob Hoskins and Sean Wilton starred in Ruby Blue, which was filmed in Thanet.

Floodgates

The floodgates could now open for many more titles. Hollywood is constantly looking to England for unusual locations, but closing roads is always a red-tape hurdle that can take weeks to overcome. With the new law in place, it can be done much faster, theoretically making Kent much more attractive to producers.

SCENE: More stars may be following Michael Caine to Kent

Kent County Council said the push for the law showed its passion and support for business and the local economy by maximising the multi-million-pound benefits from the industry. It became an Act of Parliament much earlier than expected after passing through without objection, the authority said.

The Film Office reassured residents they would not be edited out of the loop and would be consulted should an application to close their road be made.

KCC said that, while the law gave legal powers to close roads, the Kent Film Office would continue to work with residents and businesses and take their needs into account.

Tanya Oliver, director of strategic development and public access, said: "This is really exciting for Kent. We can now offer filmmakers a real flexibility to meet their needs and that's going to make us an even more attractive prospect. I think our county is set for stardom that will benefit everyone."

Celebrate folk in festival week

BROADSTAIRS FOLK WEEK

Friday, August 6, to Friday, August 13

Various venues, Broadstairs

BROADSTAIRS explodes with colour and music again this week when the annual Folk Week festival returns.

Now in its 45th year, the hugely popular festival will play host to more than 600 musicians, singers and dancers when they flock to Thanet to be part of the fun.

From big name stars like Martin Simpson, Show of Hands and Adrian Edmondson with his Bad Shepherds – whose concert has already sold out – to the up-and-coming acts, Folk Week is packed with more than 500 events.

Whatever their age, festival-goers are sure to find something to entertain and enthral them during the week. There has been a particular focus on provision for children and young people this year, which means that every member of the family can discover the joy of folk.

Kim Headley, the festival's artistic director, said: "There's good news for budding young performers, as we have taken a good look at our children's programme and given it a few tweaks."

"Shooting Roots will run workshops for youngsters aged eight to 12 and 13 to 17 and there will be a chance to form a junior Morris side. Mick Scott's workshops for seven to nine-year-olds will be a sort of Recycled Marching Band meets the X-Factor, and popular favourites Toddler's Singalong, Story Time for the over-threes and English country dancing will all be back."

For many years the festival has provided the daily Hobby Horse Club for children, which keeps young festival-goers entertained in the mornings with appearances by Clarence the Dragon and the Hooden Horses. But there is even more on offer for youngsters this year and they will even have the chance to learn an instrument, rehearse with a band and perform live on stage at the end of the week.

This year the festival will be opened by Charlie Dore and the Hula Valley Orchestra, whose hit single Pilot of the Airwaves will be known to audiences.

Other highlights of the week include performances by the Demon Barber Road Show, the Shee, Mawkin:Causley, Chris While and Julie Matthews, Pama International and many, many more. The programme even features a silent folk electronica disco and begins, as ever, with a torchlight procession on Saturday.

Also performing is American singer-songwriter Rachel Harrigan, who has just embarked on an extensive UK tour. She will perform with Rod Clements, founding member of Lindisfarne and a renowned guitar and dobro player. They will be performing songs from Harrigan's latest album, along with her first two releases, The Bootlegger's Daughter and City of Refuge. Harrigan and Clements can be seen at the concert marquee in Pierremont Park at 2.30pm on Tuesday.

FESTIVAL LINE-UP:

Clockwise from above; Charlie Dore and the Hula Valley Orchestra; Chris While and Julie Matthews; The Shee and Rachel Harrington are among the 600 artists taking part in this year's Broadstairs Folk Week

There are more than 70 workshops taking place across the week, giving festival-goers of all ages the chance to try out such diverse skills as Appalachian clogging, banjo-picking and Bollywood dance.

Music will be performed everywhere from the big concert marquee to pubs throughout the town and there will also be a craft fair, with the chance to make a holiday of it at the festival campsite.

For full event listings and booking information visit the website at www.broadstairsfolkweek.org.uk or call the box office on 01843 604080.

ALL SHOOK UP

Wednesday, August 11, to Saturday, August 14
Hazlitt Theatre, Maidstone

DUST off those blue suede shoes and get ready to rock 'n' roll with the musical, All Shook Up.

Local drama company Lights Up Production has teamed up with Folkestone-Hythe Operatic and Dramatic Society to stage the show. Inspired by the music of Elvis Presley, the show is a trip down memory lane for fans of 50s and 60s music.

Talented young performers will be bringing the swinging spirit to the stage in a show that features the music of Elvis, although it is not about the star.

"I loved last year's show, Footloose, but this is going to be bigger and better," said Max Reynolds, the show's director.

"I have a superb cast of vibrant young players and a crack technical team. This may very well be the South East's best show this year. Working with the FHODS team at the Tower Theatre is a dream."

Tickets cost £12/£10, with a special price of £8 for the opening night. To find out more and to book tickets call the box office on 01303 223925 or visit the website at www.towertheatre-folkestone.co.uk.

QUEX PARK MAIZE MAZE

Running until early September, Quex Park, Birchington

GET lost in nature at Quex Park with the attraction's Africa-themed Maize Maze.

Visitors are invited to accept the challenge of finding their way through the intriguing maze, which this year is designed in the shape of an ostrich and its chick.

Admission to the maze costs £1.50 per person and the price includes a quiz and a puzzle sheet to guide intrepid explorers through the maze.

With its African theme, the quiz is educational and helps visitors to discover more about the fascinating continent.

With its relaxing expanses of trees and parkland, Quex Park is a beautiful 250-acre site set within a larger 1,800-acre estate. Planted by John Powell-Powell in the 19th century, the many trees provide a haven for more than 50 bird species.

The park also includes Quex House, dating from 1805 and the 1819 Waterloo Bell Tower, with its very rare secular peal of 12 bells.

The Maize Maze is open from 10am to 6pm, seven days a week. To find out more about attractions and events at Quex Park visit www.quexpark.co.uk.

SUMMER AT HOLE PARK GARDENS

Ongoing, Hole Park Gardens, Rolvenden

ESCAPE to paradise at Hole Park Gardens where the exotic border is lighting up the days.

With their vibrant colours and striking shapes, the plants in the border are at their best in summer and early autumn. Plants include cannas, daturas or angel's trumpets and solanum laciniatum, otherwise known as the kangaroo apple.

Keen to ring the changes each year, head gardener Quentin Stark adds exciting new plants to give even regular visitors a nice surprise. This year, the border features the strong pink flowers of salvia involucrata 'Bethellii', contrasted with the dark black and blue of salvia guarantica. With the hairy leaves and white flowers of the sparmannia Africana, or house lime, the rare yrachycarpus princeps palm tree and the red Abyssinian banana tree, the border is an unmissable highlight of any visit.

Hole Park Gardens are open from 2pm to 6pm, every Wednesday and Thursday until October 31. Tickets cost £5 for adults and 50p for children. For details call 01580 241344 or visit the website at www.holepark.com.

X

Friday, August 13, to Sunday, August 22
Quex Park, Birchington

VENTURE out if you dare and find out if the curse of 'X' will strike again next week.

Every member of the audience will be drawn into the grisly story when Fireraisers presents a ghostly murder mystery production in the beautiful grounds of Quex House.

Each spectator is a detective, suspect, witness and potential victim when an ancient curse is unleashed.

A dysfunctional, aristocratic family has been living under a deadly tradition for years and when a group of people stumble across a crime scene, they become unavoidably caught up in the horror. Amateur sleuths in the audience must try to identify the villain.

With a reputation for producing unique and memorable work, Fireraisers have performed in such diverse locations as Selfridges' shop window on Oxford Street in London and an oilrig off Brighton Beach, where their production of The Tempest attracted a record audience of 35,000 people.

To book tickets call the box office on 01227 787787 or go online at www.theatreroyal-margate.com.

The A-Team are back with a plan that doesn't quite come together

■ BY DAMON SMITH

IT HAS been more than 25 years since George Peppard chewed on a cigar and uttered the immortal line "I love it when a plan comes together!"

Joe Carnahan's big screen revamp of The A-Team doesn't quite come together, lacking the low-rent charm of the original.

Indeed, nothing is impossible in this all-guns-blazing adventure for Colonel John 'Hannibal' Smith (Liam Neeson), Lieutenant Templeton 'Face' Peck (Bradley Cooper), Captain 'Howlin' Mad' Murdoch (Sharlto Copley) and Sergeant Bosco 'B.A.' Baracus (Quinton 'Rampage' Jackson).

Framed for the murder of their good friend, General Morrison (Gerald McRaney), the enterprising soldiers break out of military prison and hijack a plane, which is subsequently shot down by military gunships.

The quick-thinking quartet leap into an armoured tank – handily parked in the hold – just before the plane explodes, then parachute to terra firma at breakneck speed, shooting down the gunships using the tank's weapons systems.

Jessica Biel's plucky heroine, newly-demoted army lieutenant Charissa Sosa, isn't kidding when she observes: "They are the best... and they specialise in the ridiculous."

She gives chase along with tenacious CIA agent Lynch (Patrick Wilson) and his underlings.

The A-Team is preposterous, asking us to believe that each member of the squad possesses split-second timing to rescue their buddies from almost certain death.

Villains help the cause by delaying executions until the last second, as if they are expecting their plans to be thwarted.

Sure enough they are, reaching a crescendo with an overblown final showdown at the docks, on a ship laden with cargo containers.

TOP TEAM: Bradley Cooper as 'Face' Peck, Quinton 'Rampage' Jackson as BA Baracus, Sharlto Copley as 'Howlin Mad' Murdoch, and Liam Neeson as Hannibal Smith

Neeson is miscast in a role that demands far more charisma as the master tactician who vows: "I'd rather face a firing squad than betray you guys."

Thankfully, Cooper is a perfect fit for an incorrigible ladies' man, merrily flaunting his washboard abs to pique the interest of wives and girlfriends in the audience.

Copley is often unintelligible as "a functioning lunatic", who paints his face blue and pretends to be Braveheart, riding a hobbyhorse into battle against the English.

He bickers incessantly with Jackson's hard man, who has the words PITY and FOOL tattooed across his knuckles.

Biel is surplus to requirements but Wilson has a ball as a dashing yet unconventional spook, who treats his perilous mission like a fun day out.

It's no surprise when Charissa berates Lynch for riding roughshod over her agents and he cheekily retorts: "CIA's got rules. They're just cooler than yours."

Carnahan augments most scenes with flashy special effects and a booming orchestral score from Alan Silvestri that seems to have only one volume setting: deafening.

At least the theme tune is still recognisable beneath all of the clatter.

For die-hard fans, Carnahan affectionately pays tribute to the TV version with cameos from Dirk Benedict and Dwight Schultz, aka the original Face and Murdoch, after the end credits.

OLD MASTERS: Sandi Toksvig and Eric Knowles present Antiques Master

YOUR TV REVIEW ANTIQUES MASTER: BBC2, 8.30pm, Tuesday

LAST Tuesday, thoroughly deflated by my lack of ability to answer any of the questions on University Challenge, I found I had drifted into watching the next programme on BBC 2's schedule, Antiques Master.

The programme is presented by Sandi Toksvig and Antiques Roadshow regular Eric Knowles. It is a sort of Master Chef for antiques aimed at finding the country's top amateur expert in old stuff.

The start of the programme didn't look promising. The four contestants on show weren't exactly a bunch of lookers. In fact, they were as gnarled and worn-out as the furniture they had been asked to comment on.

The programme itself can't have cost an arm or a Chippendale leg to make either. The set dressing did a remarkable job of making a genuine stately home look cheap and the sound appeared to have been recorded through an old baked bean tin and a length of string.

However, having laughed ungenerously at these losers and their boring interest in the bits of bone china and fascination with French glassware, I found myself strangely drawn into the programme.

It wasn't the objects on display – quite frankly, I couldn't care less about the commode masquerading as a writing desk or the Worcester cup with its hand-painted Chinese design that was a lot older than everyone imagined.

No, it was the people. At first they looked like the sort of hard-faced cads who might prey on your granny, offering her 50p for the Faberge ash-tray she keeps her cotton buds in.

But as the programme went on, they became the most unassuming quiz hopefuls ever. I felt sorry for the psychologist from London who failed to get any points in the mystery object round. She looked so upset when she was booted out, not because she was desperate to win but because of the sheer embarrassment of it all.

Even the chap in the tweed jacket and bow tie, who I took an instant dislike to, turned out to be a bit of a bumbler, telling Sandy he was "utterly hopeless" when he got the value of a dining table wrong.

The contestants were all refreshingly nervous, unlike most of the public on the box these days who are primed to be as bubbly as possible. It is like watching a genuine Victorian parlour game on your flatscreen TV.

It's getting Hevy at Port Lympne

LEGENDS: Sepultura will be one of the headline acts at this year's Hevy Festival

■ BY SIMON ROBINSON

THE hardcore Hevy Festival takes over Port Lympne Wild Animal Park in two days' time.

The rock-fuelled three-day event will host some of the world's loudest, angriest and darkest bands across four stages.

Headliners include legendary Brazilian metallers Sepultura and Birmingham's hardest rockers Napalm Death.

The main stage boasts the likes of Gallows, F*cked Up and Rolo Tomassi (Saturday) and Glassjaw, The King Blues and Medina Lake (Sunday).

Meanwhile, the Rock Sound Stage will play host to Dananananaykroyd, Pulled Apart by Horses and March of the Raptors on Saturday and Sepultura, Napalm Death and The Black Dahlia Murder the following day.

Kentish talent comes by way of Pay No Respect, Breaking the Day, Alaska, Tyrannosaurus Alan, Lost in Colour and Bareface, among others.

Hevy bosses have also laid on non-music related entertainment for their paying punters, with a series of Gladiators-inspired fun fair rides.

Look out for Chaos, Superstar and Storm.

Hevy co-founders James Dutton and Claire Baker said the festival will be one to remember.

In a joint statement they said: "With a brand new venue and some awesome plans, this year's festival is what we've always wanted to bring to Kent – it's going to be huge!"

"There's some fantastic little festivals down here that offer a great family-friendly product. But we've always felt there's a need in this corner of the UK for something a little heavier, and that's what we hope to be – Kent's alternative music festival."

"We're really going for it too – with huge bands from all corners of rock, punk, hardcore and metal, insane extreme sports displays

"And at just £69 for a weekend camping ticket, it's seriously good value too."

"Brace yourself, this is going to be epic."

Hevy takes place at Port Lympne from Friday, August 6 to Sunday 8.

A FRENCH VIEW: Quaint villages, history and stunning architecture are just some of the attractions when you visit Ardennes in France

yourgetaways

Visiting beautiful Ardennes is just a train ride away...

■ BY KATE WHITING

THE Ardennes, an area spanning the border between Brussels and France, has all the joys of the Gallic country's most popular attributes – quaint villages, stunning architecture, a rich history – without the crowds, and sadly also without its own wine.

In times of unreliable air travel, another big attraction is the area is well served by the high speed TGV train, and can be reached within a couple of hours from Paris.

It took us a morning to get from London to Charleville-Mezieres – the twinned cities which serve as the Ardennes' central hub – by Eurostar and TGV.

Best known as the birthplace of the poet Arthur Rimbaud, the city is incredibly proud of its heritage.

Rimbaud, sadly, was less proud of his birthplace and spent most of his youth trying to escape, eventually living in places as far flung as Ethiopia.

Among Charleville's other attractions is the Place Ducale, a Louis XIII square, built, like the city itself, by the young Italian prince Charles de Gonzague to rival Paris's Place des Vosges.

The Great Puppeteer's Clock on the facade of the Puppetry Institute is also worth a visit. Every hour the mechanical Great Puppeteer treats his spectators to a show, and every couple of years the city hosts the world's biggest puppetry festival.

After a day's sightseeing I was looking forward to the highlight of the trip: two nights staying in a castle.

Just half an hour from Charleville is the town of Sedan, which is over-

Kate Whiting was a guest of Ardennes Tourism, which lists short breaks on its website at www.ardennes.com/uk. Two-night hotel short breaks from around 130 euros per person include breakfast, dinner and a welcome drink.

Double rooms at Hotel Le Chateau Fort (www.hotel-fp-sedan.com) start around £130. Breakfast is extra.

For travel by Eurostar to Charleville-Mezieres, via Lille or Paris, Rail Europe standard class returns start at £92 per person.

Rail Europe reservations: 0844 848 4070 and www.raileurope.co.uk. Car hire in Charleville-Mezieres costs from £291 for three days for a Renault Twingo, supplied by Hertz. Reservations: www.hertz.co.uk.

looked by the largest fortified castle in Europe, Chateau de Sedan.

The only small disappointment is that the owners haven't capitalised on its history. Rooms are done up simply, without four-poster beds or period furniture.

Fortunately the restaurant makes up for this oversight. With views over the courtyard and the fort's many turrets, a roaring log fire, and sumptuous paintings and red curtains. And the food is exquisite.

For lunch, we ventured out of the hotel and tried the effortlessly rustic Brasserie Artisanale du Chateau Fort, just opposite the entrance to the Historium.

Next stop was the peaceful Abbey Church and the Musee du Feutre (felt museum) in the town of Mouzon.

After another night at the Hotel Le Chateau, we headed for the hills, literally.

Near Olizy Primat, in the south of the Ardennes, is the Parc Argonne

Decouverte, which allows visitors to see nocturnal animals by day.

In a fenced compound along a discovery trail in the woods, lay a wolf, while in the park's darkened indoor mini zoo, UV lights reveal the scurrying of teeny harvest mice. Not a trip for the faint-hearted!

A warm goat's cheese salad and a glass of red wine in the "tree tops restaurant" calmed my nerves before our next stop, a museum of the Ardennes' metal-working history at the Domaine de Vendresse.

Our bed for the night was in the sweet village of Jandun at Jocelyne Bournonville's Chambre d'Hotes (www.milaville.com).

More than a B&B, these French institutions offer a home-cooked meal with fellow travellers.

A scenic drive along the Meuse valley back to Charleville, with stops at the star-shaped fortifications of Rocroi and the town of Montherme, provided a beautiful end to our trip.

MOTORS NEWS

Third generation puts its Focus on endurance

FORD has committed to making the third generation Focus as tough as it is elegant – not that the current car is unreliable.

The UK market leader says pre-production versions – due next spring – have been thrashed over frozen lakes, hammered across deserts, and driven overloaded up high Alpine passes to test endurance.

The Focus remains a UK best-seller but – a sign of the times – has lost a once impregnable number one slot to its smaller stablemate, the Fiesta.

Join the Ibiza lifestyle club with Seat's new ST

CARMAKERS' efforts to create a smart supermini lifestyle estate have been patchy, but Seat has hit the spot with the new Ibiza ST launched this month, priced from £12,070.

It joins the sporty Ibiza SC and practical Ibiza five-door to offer more carrying capacity – the 430 litres of 'seats-up' boot space marks a rise of 138 litres against the five-door – without compromising the Spanish brand's racy image. It also comes with sporty turbocharged petrol engines as well as frugal turbodiesels.

Fiat plays its BlackJack 500 hand for the gents

ADDITIONAL female buyers have been attracted to the Fiat 500 cult car by the Pink special edition.

The Italian marque has now balanced this with one for the boys – the BlackJack (from £12,165) – a timely reminder that guys can be seen to drive the retro-styled baby car.

But they must be quick as just 200 of the matt black specials will be sold, based on the existing 1.2 and 1.4 Sport and featuring metallic exterior highlights plus matt black alloys and red brake callipers.

REAL DEAL: Despite a gimmicky interior the new BMW 5-Series is slightly larger than its predecessor and has a longer wheelbase allowing both driver and passengers extra legroom

Jumbo's imprint fails to dent this classy 5-Series

BMW's all-new 5-Series has a bonnet apparently sculpted by the weight of an elephant's backside.

But the latest 'Five' (from £31,360) is still classier and sleeker than its impressive predecessor and the fit and finish and materials quality is peerless.

It's gimmicky inside though: I found the sounds/sat nav iDrive interface irritating and the 'ergonomic' auto gearbox selector is also ugly and fussy to use – until you get used to it.

Once under way though, my mutterings subsided; this new BMW is a true class act and there's even a piece of new technology that I do like – the 'head-up' display for the speed.

Despite being slightly larger than before, the car feels nimble and bowls along beautifully with the use of aluminium for some bodywork, enhancing the natural balance of BMW's classic rear-wheel drive layout.

This adds to a mix of sure-footed handling and out-and-out cruising comfort that counter-attacks its arch-rival, the Jaguar XF.

The £1,495 extra for the 5-Series' eight-speed auto 'box also looks like money well spent; not only are the changes silky smooth whether in auto or manual mode but, in the case of our £37,175 530d SE diesel test car, it manages to lower CO2 emissions (160g/km) enough to limbo beneath the upper limit on road tax bracket G thereby incurring a flat £155/year.

The six-speed manual's 166g/km though means a £250 hit in year one plus £180 thereafter and there will be benefit in kind consequences too.

On paper, the auto is marginally better on fuel as well – the official combined mpg is 45.6 against 44.8 for the manual – and yet both cars can leap smoothly to 62mph in just 6.3 seconds.

The lightweight 245bhp in-line six-cylinder diesel is a delight, delivering power freely and smoothly with a barely audible burble worthy of a V8 petrol unit.

The BMW also has a clear edge over the rival Jag in cabin space, where the new model's longer wheelbase allows even more legroom than before and greater passenger comfort, yet the boot appears more cavernous.

I was also impressed by the amount of kit that comes as standard – not a comment made often on BMWs in the past, especially so soon after launch.

PROPERTY NEWS

Small price rise shows lack of market stability

THE growing uncertainty surrounding the stability of the UK residential housing market has been confirmed in the tentative rise in house prices recorded by Communities and Local Government.

Figures indicate that the average price of a UK home increased by 0.7 per cent between May and April, just 11 per cent higher than in May 2009, Government statistics show.

The adjusted average house price in the UK for May stood at £209,505, reflecting just 1.7 per cent growth for the preceding three months.

This month-on-month increase stands in contrast to the small increase recorded in the Nationwide Building Society figures and the declines reported by Halifax and the Land Registry for the same month.

Royal Institution of Chartered Surveyors chief economist Simon Rubinsohn suggested that "low transaction volumes" are adding to "volatility of the individual series".

Villagers 'being forced out by cost of homes'

YOUNG people in rural areas are finding it increasingly difficult to get on to the property ladder, according to PricedOut.org.uk.

The lobby group's press officer Katy John claims that affordability in the countryside is an increasing problem, with the average property now costing 10 times the average salary.

It is therefore time that the government recognises what effect the buy-to-let boom and the demand for second houses has had, she added.

In the latest research from the National Housing Federation, it was revealed that 65 per cent of people living in the countryside feel that first-time buyers are being forced out of their local villages by high house prices.

"The Government needs to establish and meet clear targets for building more homes in rural areas, particularly suitable homes for young families trying to get on the housing ladder."

'Right to Build' proposal to bypass planning laws

■ BY NICK AMES

VILLAGES will be able to build new homes without getting planning permission from their local authority if the Government's 'Right to Build' proposals come into effect.

The plan is meant to deliver the dual benefits of increasing the amount of affordable homes in rural areas and giving more power to local communities, as mapped out in Prime Minister David Cameron's Big Society proposals.

It is an attempt to move power in planning away from local authorities and enable villagers to have far more of a say in what is going to be constructed.

Mandate

Housing minister Grant Shapps has said the idea is that small developments of fewer than 20 homes can be built without planning permission.

Voting on proposals would be carried out during local elections and the Government says a large mandate in favour – maybe up to 80 per cent – would be necessary for the development plans to go ahead.

Mr Shapps said: "Loads of people in village communities are saying 'Our school's closing, our post offices are under threat, we're losing our community facilities'."

"Our problem is that the young people grow up and find they can't afford to live in this village any more."

"We believe that people have a right to stay in their community, and if people want to build that community to make it a bit bigger and expand it a bit, within reason, they should have the powers to do that."

But the Campaign to Protect Rural England

VILLAGE HOMES: Small developments might not need planning permission under the Right to Build scheme

(CPRE) said that the proposal needs a little more thought.

"A more democratic approach to house building is welcome, as local people should always be given a say in development," said the CPRE's head of planning Fiona Howie.

"We are pleased that the Government is considering how to protect and enhance rural village life, and delivering affordable housing in rural areas will be a critical part of this."

"However, bypassing the planning process is not the way to deliver it, and any proposals should include proper planning scrutiny."

"The level and location of development should be informed by a proper assessment of local housing need and an understanding of whether the local environment can accommodate more development."

"This capacity should be assessed through democratic local plans, and not a simple ballot."

"A central part of the Government's wider planning reform proposals is to give local communities a pivotal role in shaping local plans. "The Government should focus its efforts on getting these broader reforms right, so that local communities are truly involved in planning for their area as a whole."

"This, rather than a new Right to Build, should ensure local people are able to shape future development in their areas."

Rise in sales 'unlikely to be sustained'

NEW figures from HM Revenue & Customs show the number of homes sold in the UK rising to 86,000 in June.

Completed transactions on properties worth over £40,000 increased by an annual 15 per cent having leapt 21 per cent in May.

The summer bounce also took volumes for the first six months of the year up 21 per cent on the comparable period of 2009.

However, housing market activity remains weak and analysts predict a flat second half of the year at best in terms of prices and sales.

An influx of new instructions for sale following the abolition of Home Information Packs is putting pressure on prices while new buyer enquiries remain restricted by a lack of mortgage finance.

Halifax reported a 0.6 per cent fall in the average value of a home in June, with the annual rate of gain easing back to 6.3 per cent, and according to Rightmove, home owners coming onto the market are dropping asking prices, for the first time this year.

The property portal has detected a 0.6 per cent decline in the average new vendor's ambitions in July, amounting to £1,435 in cash.

CRICKET

BY DAVID PRITCHARD

Kent League Division One

Sandwich Town 1st XI v Beckenham 1st XI

A FAILURE with the bat saw Sandwich Town slip to a losing draw against Beckenham, meaning they fell out of the Division One promotion places.

The hosts were unable to replicate a huge partnership in Beckenham's innings, which proved to be the decisive contribution of the match.

Beckenham were put into bat and, led by Chris Isles, they made a good start.

The visitors had 52 runs on the board when Craig Spanton made the first breakthrough, but it did little to help Sandwich's cause.

Isles was joined by Raza Ali Dar (73) and the pair put on a second wicket stand worth 142.

Only Alan Amos (3 for 49) was able to make an impact with the ball, finally removing Isles for 121.

A half-century from Vishaul Singh kept Sandwich's hopes alive after an indifferent start, but no one else could pass 30.

Losing five wickets for 32 runs, the priority switched from a run chase to merely avoiding defeat, which they managed.

The defeat allowed Sandwich to be leapfrogged by Blackheath, who moved up to second with a win at Ashford.

There are only six points between the two sides and Sandwich will fancy their chances of getting back to winning ways when they visit bottom-placed Harvel on Saturday.

Sandwich leapfrogged by visitors after poor display

COSTLY: Sandwich's batsmen struggled on Saturday in a losing draw with Beckenham, which saw the visitors take top spot in the league

LOCAL CRICKET ROUND-UP

KENT LEAGUE DIVISION TWO 2ND XI

Folkestone 2nd XI v Hythe 2nd XI

HYTHE 2nds moved closer to clinching promotion as they battled to win a low-scoring game with neighbours Folkestone 2nds by three wickets.

After a solid start Folkestone's innings fell away dramatically once openers Anthony Stanley (20) and Nick Graham (18) were dismissed. There were four ducks further down the order as the hosts were all out for only 122.

The Hythe reply was built around a stoical effort from Nigel Pichowski. The number four faced 140 balls for his 24 runs as the visitors inched to victory in the 58th over.

Sibton Park 1st XI v Whitstable 1st XI

LEAGUE leaders Sibton Park extended their advantage, but needed a dramatic late burst to beat Whitstable by three runs.

Batting first, the home side set about posting a competitive score as their top order all made runs. Andy Allon, Tom Payne and Steve Hickmott all hit half centuries to make up for a handful of disappointing scores in the middle order.

Whitstable's challenge rested almost entirely on Byron Gould's 81 and they were edged closer by Jake Guinan (37). With just seven runs needed they still had two wickets in hand, until a late twist handed Park victory, thanks largely to Allon's 5 for 76.

KENT LEAGUE DIVISION FOUR

OD CUACO 1st XI v Betteshanger Colliery 1st XI

BETTESHANGER Colliery's batsmen failed to post a decent score against OD CUACO as they went down by four wickets.

The innings began badly, with the openers returning to the pavilion after adding just seven runs between them.

Andrew McNicolas led the resistance with 57, but none of his team-mates could follow suit as Betteshanger were all out for 161.

OD CUACO got off to a good start and Gary Williamson carried his bat with 58 not out. McNicolas and Clive Towe took two wickets each, but Alex Lake's 31 saw the home side to victory.

Deal Victoria &amp; Barns Close 1st XI v Bickley Park 3rd XI

DEAL Victoria's bowlers got them out of jail after defending a low total to beat Bickley Park 3rds by 26 runs.

In difficult batting conditions most of the home side's batsmen made promising starts before getting out cheaply.

Without anyone making a significant contribution they were left in big trouble as the tail meekly surrendered.

Chasing just 145 for victory, Bickley made a hash of their reply, slipping to 23 for 5.

They staggered on to 118 all out, with Scott McNamara the pick of an excellent bowling unit with 4 for 18.

Whites boss looks set to dip into the loan market

FOOTBALL

BY TOM HOWARD

DOVER Athletic boss Martin Hayes says he may dip into the loan market if unable to find the players he wants to sign before the start of the season.

The Whites manager has been frantically trying to construct his new-look squad during pre-season, but despite there being just over a week before the start of the new season he is not panicking over the lack of new signings.

One of Hayes' main areas he wishes to strengthen is his side's options out wide with only one out-and-out winger in James Rogers at the club.

The Whites boss has used several wingers in pre-season, with the latest being former Ebbsfleet United winger Ishmael Welsh and ex-Northampton winger Joe Benjamin.

Although the Conference South season begins on August 14, Hayes admitted he will move into the loan market if he cannot find the type of player he is looking to sign on a permanent basis.

He said: "It's well documented I am looking to strengthen out wide, but I will only make a decision once I have found the right kind of players I'm looking for."

"I admit I would have liked to have all the players I want in place by now, but I'm not panicking. I don't want to sign players for the sake of it. I've got a couple more players coming down to look at, but if I'm not happy then we may have to take someone on-loan."

On Saturday the Whites suffered their second defeat in pre-season by losing 1-0 to Ryman Premier League side Carshalton Athletic.

The game was settled by an own goal from triallist Bobby Aison on the stroke of half-time.

A Ricardo Joseph cross was met by the defender and instead of clearing the danger, he flicked the ball past Ross Flitney into the net.

Hayes continues to run his eye over striker Elliot Charles who played 90 minutes and Luke l'Anson who featured in the second-half. The Dover boss is yet to decide whether to offer contracts to the pair.

The Whites play their final pre-season game at home to Cray Wanderers on Friday.

BRACE: Simon Austin scored twice against Lordswood

Seasiders' boss sees light pre-season as not such a bad thing

FOLKESTONE Invicta continued their good start to pre-season with a 4-1 win at Kent League side Lordswood on Saturday.

Liam Dickson gave the visitors a slender lead at half-time, before Simon Austin struck twice to cancel out a goal from former Chatham striker Dominic Elmes.

Josh Vincent added a fourth before the end to wrap up a straightforward victory.

Due to Invicta having to cancel their home games because of work over-running on their pitch, it was only the Seasiders' second run-out of the summer.

Neil Cugley, Invicta's manager, was pleased with the display and thinks the relatively light schedule in pre-season could help his small squad.

He said: "We did what we wanted. We're basically just trying to keep it ticking along, we don't want to go too mad. People like Jimmy Dryden and Paul Jones have been out for a long time now and we just don't want to push them too hard."

The line-up included two triallists at wing-back. Olly Bartrum, a former Gillingham youngster, spent time on loan at Cheriton Road last season, while the left-sided Luke Webb has come in from the local leagues. Both did well, but Cugley is not sure whether he has room to offer them deals for the new Ryman Premier season.

He said: "We're still waiting to see with the finances. Hopefully we'll be stronger, we've got a bit more depth and competition for places than last year, which is important. We're not going to be able to get away with such a small squad as we did last year - going up a division you need fresh legs coming off the bench."

Invicta will look to step up their preparations this Saturday when they visit Leatherhead, the side they beat on penalties in last season's play-off semi-final.

DISAPPOINTING: Karen Stupples failed to make the cut

Struggling Stupples misses cut at Open

AN INDIFFERENT opening two rounds saw Karen Stupples miss the cut at the Ricoh Women's British Open last weekend.

The 37-year-old from Deal went into the tournament at Royal Birkdale in reasonable form after sharing 43rd place at the Evian Masters a week earlier.

After a bogey at the second, her opening round was brought to life by holing her approach shot for an eagle two at the third hole. It proved to be the only time the 2004 champion was under par for the whole tournament and three bogeys saw her reach the turn at two-over-par.

Another three shots were dropped on the back nine in a five-over-par round of 77. Needing a fast start in the second round to make the cut, Stupples bogeyed the third and then a double bogey at the eighth effectively ended her challenge.

The world number 63 made three birdies coming home, but carded a 75 to finish on eight-over-par, three shots away from making the cut.

After a week's break Stupples will play in the Wales Ladies Championship of Europe in Conwy, which she won last year.

Porter eyes additions to boost Hythe's title charge

FOOTBALL

DESPITE signing Damian Abel last week, Hythe Town boss Scott Porter has not ruled out making further additions to his squad ahead of the start of the Kent League season this weekend.

The forward was expected to remain at Faversham Town, where he played a role in their Kent League title-winning side last season. Instead Abel, a long-term target for Porter, appeared in Hythe's 3-1 win against Maidstone United last week and signed on for a second spell at the club after the game.

Abel's arrival strengthens an impressive-looking squad at Reachfields. Last season's squad has remained intact and been supplemented with Lee Shearer, Brendon Cass and Gary Mickelborough, who scored in a 3-1 defeat to Chatham Town on Saturday.

Porter, whose side begin their Kent League campaign away to VCD Athletic on Saturday, is open about the possibility of more signings in a bid to win the title.

He said: "You never know, if there are other people available we'll always look to strengthen because it's a long old season. Maybe we'll look for something else, we don't know yet."

Deal Town, meanwhile, entertain Lordswood as they return to league action on Saturday, but preparations for Derek Hares' side have not run as smoothly as the manager may have liked.

Having recorded an impressive 2-0 win over Basingstoke Town, Deal then slipped to successive home defeats in the space of five days, conceding nine goals and offering none in reply.

A 4-0 home reverse against Whitstable Town last Tuesday was followed by a 5-0 defeat to Billericay Town on Saturday and Hares will hope to start with a clean slate on the opening weekend of the Kent League season.
